A brief history of The United States

The USA is in North America. A long time ago, Native Americans, also called American Indians, lived in nature. 400 years ago, European pilgrims arrived in America and started chasing the Natives away from their lands. 300 years ago, Europeans named the country: the United States of America. They reduced African people to slavery and forced them to work. 150 years ago, the Civil War began between the North and the South. The North won the war and abolished slavery. At the same time, settlers and cowboys colonized the Western United States. Today, the American people are of many origins: Europe, Africa, Asia, and South America. Some of them are rich, some of them are poor, but everyone believes that the USA is the land of opportunity.
